

BRISBANE

LISTA DEI VINI

WINTER 24

The great enoteche of Roma are the inspiration behind 1889 Enoteca. I have been lucky enough to travel to Italy many times over the last eighteen years and had the opportunity to go to great Roman institutions such as Enoteca Ferrara and Casa Bleve. These two famous establishments are at the forefront of the enoteche movement in Italy. Their ability to showcase great Italian wines matched with wonderful Roman food is what got me hooked and here we are, hopefully, a little piece of Trastevere in Woolloongabba.

After being in the wine industry for 30 years I have learnt one thing- you never stop learning new things about wine. We opened the restaurant in 2008 and I can say that the original wine list I put together was one of the best things I had done and I was incredibly proud of it (and I still am). I worked very hard to put together a list of producers that I liked and that I thought that our customers would like. I had iconic producers from Italy such as Sassicaia, Ornellaia, and Montevetrano; from Australia Henschke and Penfolds and from France we had Latour and Lafite. I brought these wines from private cellars in Italy and Australia as well as scouring wine auctions all over the world. The list was an equal mix of Australian, Italian and French wines. It is relatively easy to put together a 'greatest hits' list of fantastic vintages from the best producers and have everybody pat you on the back but I knew that there was something missing. I just couldn't put my finger on it. Over the next few years the list slowly evolved but it was during a research trip to Italy in early 2010 that completely changed my views on how wine is produced and what it represents. I went to a wine fair in Roma and the penny finally dropped.

I tasted wines that were made 'naturally'. As I started to taste these wines there was a common theme running throughout- no intervention with chemicals in their grape growing or winemaking. Their grapes had been grown organically or biodynamically without the use of any pesticides, systemic or synthetic fertilisers which is the way grapes have been grown for thousands of years. The winemakers rely on natural yeasts to make the wine rather than introducing safe yeasts to do the work. They receive little or no-finishing, no filtration and a minimal use of sulphur dioxide. The result is wines that are bright, fresh and speak about their origins. My eyes were completely opened to what real wine is.

Fifteen years on and our wine list is very different. We always had a handful of great wines from producers that very few people had heard of but I am now happy to say that these unknowns make up the core of our list and have become firm favourites with both our staff and our customers. The list is now focused on Italian wines that are from small, artisan producers who represent the traditions of their territory. I have become great friends with these producers and I very happy to have their brilliant wines on the pages of this list.

It goes without saying that an Italian meal would not be complete without wine and natural wine in general is the perfect partner for our traditional Roman food and one without the other just doesn't seem right!

This list represents my journey and my fascination with Italian wine.

An elegant, full-bodied red wine aged 24 months in French oak casks.
Grapes are handpicked from different vines planted in 1948 and 1989,
on south/south-east-facing slopes.
The palate is typically warm and elegant with smooth, silky tannins and a long finish.

Frizzante/sparkling

Veneto, Italia

Veneto's most famous sparkling wine comes from the hills around Conegliano and Valdobbiadene. Prosecco's varietal trademark is the juicy mouth-watering granny smith apple flavour which makes it the perfect aperitivo.

Piemonte

Literally 'foot of the mountains' the north-west province of Piemonte is home to some of Italy's most famous wines. Cortese is all chalk, minerals and white peaches while the almost extinct Arneis is pithy and floral.

Trentino-Alto-Adige

The regions are bordered by Austria to the north, by Switzerland to the north-west and by the regions of Lombardy and Veneto to the west and south, respectively. It is extremely mountainous, covering a large part of the Dolomites and the Southern Alps. Think mountain streams and glacier sculptured landscapes, incredibly steep vineyards supported by dry stone walls. Extreme grape growing.

Veneto

Veneto is located in the north-eastern part of Italy, bordering on the regions of Emilia-Romagna and Lombardia, Trentino-Alto Adige/Südtirol and Friuli-Venezia-Giulia, and the nation of Austria. It lies between the Alps and the Adriatic Sea and is crossed by the rivers Po, Adige, Brenta and Piave. The narrow band of hills between the communes of Soave and Monforte d'Alpone are the home of Veneto's most famous white grape, Garganega. The hills include remnants of ancient volcanoes with elevations ranging between 500 to 1100 feet. The deep volcanic soils are where Garganega expresses it most pure, aromatically complex and seductively textured wines.

Friuli-Venezia-Giulia

Vines have been cultivated in Friuli from as far back as the 13th century BC but Friuli can also lay claim to being the birth place of modern Italian white wine. The revolution began in the late 1960's thanks to the likes of Silvio Jermann & Mario Schiopetto who introduced temperature controlled fermentation producing clean, crisp wines which were a revelation at the time. Today, the styles vary from the crystal clean, precise wines of Subida di Monte to late harvested, complex, barrel fermented 'field blends' wines of Jermann, Livio Felluga and the more radical wines of Radikon & Gravner.

Oslavia

The tiny enclave of Oslavia (within the Collio area) is home to two of Italy's best and most controversial winemakers, Stanko Radikon and Josko Gravner. These wines are orange in colour and are explosive in their aromatics and flavour. These wines are deep, multi-layered and extremely complex and sit right on the edge of the new winemaking frontier.

Gravner

Josko Gravner is one of the leading protagonists of Italian wine history. Josko perfectly represents a radical change in the way of thinking about wine. He successfully experimented with a new technique: fermenting the grapes in terracotta amphorae originating from the Caucasus, from which the name of his wines derives. For more than 30 years he has not used synthetic chemical products in his vineyards, which he works exclusively by hand, with unparalleled care and passion, rooted in his deep sensitivity and respect for the ecosystem in which we live. His way of making wine certainly goes against the trends of the past and of the moment, but his choices have always been impeccable; working the grapes in terracotta amphorae, very long macerations, marketing the wines no earlier than seven years after the harvest.

La Castellada

Along the road that runs through the hills of Oslavia, a small hamlet of Gorizia close to the Slovenian border, lie the vineyards of the Bensa family, cultivated by brothers Giorgio and Nicolò and the younger Matteo and Stefano. The focus on natural techniques is evident in the cellar, where traditional winemaking techniques are strictly followed. All the grapes ferment on the skins in truncated cone vats for varying lengths of time, using only indigenous yeasts. The wines are then aged in barriques or large casks for one or two years and then in steel for another year before being bottled without filtration.

Carso (Italia)/Kras (Slovenia)

The small Carso DOC is located in the east of the Friuli, bordered by Slovenia and the Gulf of Trieste. The wind-swept, limestone plateau is one of the most unforgiving viticultural areas in all of Italy with the 'bora' whipping up cold 120km winds. The native Vitovska variety is particularly hardy and shows a natural austerity mimicking the landscape. Malvasia is another variety that grows incredibly well in the tough limestone soil, giving wines of aromatic complexity and deep ripe flavours.

Liguria

Liguria's wine region is located along the Italian Riviera and is bordered by the Piedmont wine region on the north, the Alps and French wine region of Provence on the west. Much of the terrain is remote, with some coastal vines even catching the spray from the sea.

2018 Azienda Agricola Campogrande 'Telemaco' Bosco

Emilia-Romagna

The orange wines from La Stoppa & Denavolo winemaker Giulio Armani ranks amongst the best wines from Italy. Naturally fermented and left on skins, is packed with delicious preserved fruit characters underpinned by gentle grape skin tannins and fresh acidity. Take a walk on the wild side!

Toscana

The undisputed king of white grapes in Toscana is Vernaccia. It is grown around the town of San Gimignano where it produces clean, floral, medium bodied wines with a distinctly bitter herbal finish. Vermentino is the up and coming variety of coastal Toscana where the warmth of the climate gives the wines depth and creamy texture. Ansonica/Ansonaco produces seductively textured wines with a distinctive sea spray character.

Marche

Le Marche produces a large variety of wines including 13 varieties of wine carrying the D.O.C. (Denominazione di Origine Controllata) label. Many of these wines are little known outside of Italy but visitors to the region have a pleasant surprise when they try the local wine produced by many small aziende and cantinas. The following varieties of vines are the most common, growing well on the gentle slopes of the hilly region: Montepulciano d'Abruzzo, Sangiovese, Ciliegolo, Pinot nero and bianco, Verdicchio, Trebbiano, Malvasia of Tuscany, Vernaccia Nera.

Abruzzo

Located in the mountainous central Italian region of Abruzzo along the Adriatic Sea. It is bordered by the Molise wine region to the south, Marche to the north and Lazio to the west. Trebbiano is king in Abruzzo, giving wines of interest of body, texture one of Italy's great red grape varieties, Sagrantino. The hill top of Montefalco is spiritual home of Sagrantino and, in the hands of Giampiero Bea, it makes one of the worlds best.

Lazio

The wines of Lazio were held in high regard in Roman times, with the wines such as Caere, Setinum gracing the tables of Roman emperors. The Lazio area is crossed by four great volcanic systems giving soils that are rich with ancient lava and tufa, perfect for growing the ancient and very rare varieties of Bellone & Greco Moro

Piemonte

Literally 'foot of the mountains', the north-west province of Piemonte is home to some of Italy's most famous wines namely Barolo & Barbaresco. An ancient sea bed with calcareous soils rich in sandstone & limestone gives the wine perfume and bold flavours. Nebbiolo is king in this part of Italy closely followed by Barbera and Dolcetto.

Dolcetto

The little sweet one. Full of bright, juicy fruit and juicy tannin.

2022 Fontanabianca Dolcetto d'Alba

2022 Elio Altare Dolcetto d'Alba

Brachetto

If Moscato had a brother it would be Brachetto. Traditionally Brachetto is made into a semi sweet, lightly frizzante wine that bursts at the seams with florals, fruit and sugar.

2020 Hilberg-Pasquero 'Vareij' Brachetto & Barbera

Barbera

The work-horse of Piemonte reds, Barbera is brightly colored, cherry scented, softly textured, firmly acidic with chalky tannins. The best sites are located around Alba, Asti and the Monferrato hills.

Barolo

The heartland of Nebbiolo, the Barolo DOCG can be split into two distinct zones with the central valley to the west and the Serralunga valley to the east. The central valley has a dominance of tortonian soil with its blue tints, compact calcareous marl mixed sand and rich in magnesium resulting in wines that perfumed, elegant, round and generally approachable when young. The Serralunga Valley has much lighter coloured soil, looser calcareous marl, more iron and phosphorous and much less fertile with the wines showing more colour, deeper flavours, muscular structure and longer ageing potential.

Lombardia

Valtellina, an alpine valley in the far north of Lombardy, has been producing wine for over 2000 years. Today it is known for its bright, cherry-scented wines made from the Nebbiolo grape variety.

Chiavennasca

Chiavennasca is the red grape variety that dominates throughout the Valtellina, the one from which the great immortal wines of the Valtellina Superiore DOCG are produced, such as Sforzato l'Inferno, Valgella, Sassella, Grumello. But perhaps what not everyone knows is that Chiavennasca is a clone of Nebbiolo. Certainly, it is not simply a mutation of Nebbiolo, because it has been cultivated in total isolation for more than 500 years in Valtellina, so it has taken a different evolutionary path, yes it developed by adapting to particular conditions and the clonal selection was also particular.

Trentino

Known for the rare Teroldego grape which is found around the towns of Mezzolombardo & Mezzacorona in Trentino where the gravelly, limestone rich soils gives wines of deep, rich colour, fruit sweet/savoury palate with a distinctive tarry edge. Cabernet sauvignon is also very common in the area and has been grown there for centuries making fabulous deep wines with plenty of mountain character.

Teroldego

Teroldego is a deeply colored red wine grape grown mostly in the mountainous Trentino wine region of northern Italy where it is the main dark-skinned variety. This variety produces deeply pigmented red wines with an intensely fruity character, a style that has become something of an icon for Trentino's wine industry. It is soft and needs very little aging, usually being drunk within three years of bottling, though it can cellar well for up to 10 years.

Veneto

Veneto is located in the northeastern part of Italy, bordering on the regions of Emilia-Romagna and Lombardia, Trentino-Alto-Adige/ Südtirol and Friuli-Venezia- Giulia, and the nation of Austria. It lies between the Alps and the Adriatic Sea and is crossed by the rivers Po, Adige, Brenta and Piave.

Valpolicella & Amarone

Sandwiched in between the towns of Sant’Ambrogio and Negrar are the ‘classico’ vineyards of Valpolicella. Here Corvina, Molinara & Rondinella make up Valpolicella & Amarone della Valpolicella with two very distinct styles. Valpolicella ‘normale’ wine made without ‘appassimento’ drying the grapes and thus concentrating the sugar and adding glycerin to the texture.

Giuseppe Quintarelli

Giuseppe Quintarelli has 10 hectares of vineyards with three hectares on the hill called Monte Ca’ Paletta next to the winery. They use the pergola Veronese system for the local varieties (Corvina and Corvinone), and Guyot for the international varieties (Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc and Merlot). Sustainable vine growing is at the core what they do.

At Quintarelli there is an obsession about quality: from the product itself, to the quality of the corks, glass and bottle caps. They treat wine with respect and patience, allowing it to develop to its maximum potential before it is bottled.

Gravner

To say Josko Gravner is a rockstar in the world of wine would be an understatement. Every serious establishment in Europe clamours for a few of the 39000 bottles he produces from his 18 hectare estate. The sensitive use of the ancient winemaking techniques allow nature to take its path and the result is an incredibly complex, nuanced wine that jumps from the glass. It seems that the amphorae allows every nuance to shine in his wines.

Toscana

The Etruscans were responsible for starting viticulture in Toscana as long ago as 500 BC. This is a diverse region with many different 'terra', the main areas are Chianti Classico which lies in between Firenze & Siena, Montalcino is south of Siena and the Maremma which is located on the coast and is the warmest of all of Toscana's growing areas. Sangiovese is the heart and soul of most Tuscan reds along with smaller amounts of Colorino, Caniolo, Malvasia Nera, Foglia Tonda & Mammolo.

Marche

Le Marche produces a large variety of wines including 13 varieties of wine carrying the D.O.C. (Denominazione di Origine Controllata) label. Many of these wines are little known outside of Italy but visitors to the region have a pleasant surprise when they try the local wine produced by many small aziende and cantinas. The following varieties of vines are the most common, growing well on the gentle slopes of the hilly region: Montepulciano d'Abruzzo, Sangiovese, Cilieggiolo, Pinot nero and bianco, Verdicchio, Trebbiano, Malvasia of Tuscany, Vernaccia Nera.

Abruzzo

Located in the mountainous central Italian region of Abruzzo along the Adriatic Sea. It is bordered by the Molise wine region to the south, Marche to the north and Lazio to the west. The most notable wine of the region is Montepulciano d'Abruzzo produced by the Montepulciano grape that is distinct from the Sangiovese grape behind the Tuscan wine Vino Nobile di Montepulciano. Together with Trebbiano d'Abruzzo, In the completely mountainous province of L'Aquila in the west some rosé wine known as Cerasuolo from the Montepulciano grape is produced.

Umbria

The land locked region of Umbria is home to one of Italy's great red grape varieties, Sagrantino. The hill top of Montefalco is spiritual home of Sagrantino and in the hands of Giampiero Bea it makes one of the worlds best wines. Deep yet light, dense yet delicate, perfumed yet raw, Bea's wines are delicious and extremely satisfying.

Paolo Bea

Paolo Bea is a maestro of Italian winemaking, celebrated for his exceptional craftsmanship and dedication to natural, artisanal methods. His wines, particularly his Sagrantino di Montefalco, are a testament to his profound understanding of both tradition and terroir.

With a commitment to organic and biodynamic practices, Bea produces wines of extraordinary depth and complexity, characterized by their vibrant flavors and remarkable aging potential.

Each bottle embodies a harmonious balance of robust tannins, rich fruit, and nuanced earthy undertones that reflect the essence of Umbria.

Campania

Campania is the main repository for viticultural history of the Italian south thanks to the migration to Italy by the Greeks. Aglianico is being called the Nebbiolo of the south with its heroic structure, the savoury cigar box/ coffee notes are perfectly offset by sweeter black cherry fruit. Piediroso is the next variety to watch.

Sicilia

Nero d'Avola, Nerello Mascalese, Nerello Cappuccio & Frappato are all native Sicilian varieties and all share a common generosity and Mediterranean warmth. Sicilia, particularly Etna, are very popular in Italian Enoteca circles, Nerello Mascalese & Nerello Cappuccio are varieties grown on the volcanic slopes of Etna and soil gives the wines of enormous character.

Nerello Mascalese & Nerello Cappuccio

Nerello Mascalese is a highly regarded, dark-skinned grape variety that grows most commonly on the volcanic slopes of Mount Etna in Sicily. Its wines, which have had a rapid upsurge in popularity in the last decade, have a tendency to reflect their surroundings, giving taut, fresh red wines with fruity, herbaceous flavors, excellent minerality and an earthy nuance. Its partner Nerello Cappuccio, with its spicy aromas, adds body and roundness to the blends resulting in a smoother feeling on the palate.

Frank Cornelissen

Located in one of the most prestigious areas on Mount Etna, Frank Cornelissen adopts a philosophical approach to winemaking: asserting the principle that man can never fully understand Nature and its course, he chooses to avoid any intervention not strictly necessary - be it chemical or biological - in the cultivation of his lands. Techniques such as using buckenheat to balance the soil, introducing bees for a more complex ecosystem, and utilizing terracotta amphorae buried in volcanic rock allow Frank to produce wines that are pure, of great elegance and distinction. The pinnacle of his work is found in his Grand Vin 'Magma,' a 100% Nerello Mascalese obtained only in the best years from vineyards over 100 years old. Described as 'the result of the drive and the perfection of man combined with an unbelievably special soil,' Magma ranks among the best Pinot Noirs of Burgundy and the finest Barolos.
